

CITY POLICE RULE

Chicago Alderman Tells of Mounted Squads.

Declares Corner Bluecoats in New York Are Without Whistles and Little Attention is Paid to Their Authority.

Chicago.—Chicago's mounted police squad and the crossing policemen guarding the street corners in the business district show up well in comparison with the police of other cities, according to Alderman Henry D. Capitain, who has just returned from a trip through New York, Philadelphia and Boston.

"After I have seen the way other large cities handle their crowds, I must say Chicago is far ahead of them, and our policemen deserve great credit," he said.

"From the observations I made in the great cities visited in the east I have come to the conclusion that mounted police used to guard traffic in congested districts have proved a success. Chicago was right in adopting this plan, and although other cities have been slow to follow, as all of the cities we visited rely entirely on men on foot to guide traffic, I think they will fall in line sooner or later."

While unsparing in his words of praise of the work accomplished by the local mounted police, the city father divided honors equally with the crossing bluecoat who blows the whistle which starts the cars, automobiles, wagons and crowds moving in one direction, and said neither overlap the other, but augments the other's efficiency.

"I was surprised to see," the alderman continued, "that in a city as large as New York the corner policeman was not provided with a whistle as a figure of authority for the traffic to recognize. Nor in any of the other cities visited have they solved this important problem by the use of a whistle."

"In New York, for instance, the policeman starts the traffic by an arm motion, which is so inadequate that it is reflected in the little attention the public pays to him."

"In Boston some of the streets are so narrow that frequently one is used as an avenue for traffic going in one direction, while an entirely different street has to be used by the traffic going in the opposite direction. Some of these streets are only wide enough to admit the passage of a single wagon."

"Particularly was I on the lookout for the way automobile regulations were enforced in other cities. Chicago is ahead of New York in this respect, too, I think. There they do not seem to regulate them as well as here. In fact, it seemed to me that an automobile was especially favored by the policemen, as I witnessed them running in and out in all directions, some at high speed that would call for an immediate arrest here, and the New York police did not act."

"The chauffeurs and owners running cars seem to have no regard, in my opinion, for the rights of pedestrians. Actually, I saw more narrow escapes through collisions in one day in New York than I would see here in two weeks."

TO MARK OLDEST HOUSE

Commemorative Plate Will be Placed on Residence Erected in City of Paris in 1407.

Paris.—A commemorative plate is about to be placed on the oldest house in Paris, 51 Rue de Montmorency, in the Temple district. It is a corner house just off the Boulevard Sébastopol, at the junction of the Rue St. Martin with the Rue de Montmorency. The house, which was built in 1407 by the philanthropist Nicolas Flamel, is now known as the Hotel Helvétia, and also as the Taverne Nicolas Flamel. It was originally built as a hostelry for workingmen, the revenue from whose lodgings was used to pay for the food they consumed. Some years go when the front of the house was restored inscriptions were laid bare which revealed the original purposes of the building.

BUILT BY RULE OF THREE

Archaeologists to Visit Odd Structure at Northampton Which Dates From the Year 1500.

London.—The Royal Archaeological Institute, during its next session at Northampton, will visit one of the quaintest buildings ever erected in England.

The structure was built in 1500 by John Tresham, is symbolic of the Trinity, and everything about it is built in threes. There are three sides, with three gables on each side and three floors with three windows on each face.

Each front is 23 feet long and bears a legend of 83 letters. The chimney is also three-sided.

Refuse to Wear Skirts.

Mombasa, East Africa.—The local Portuguese governor of Inhambarane has been forced to rescind his recent order that the native women of that section wear skirts. The edict aroused tremendous opposition among the women of the surrounding country, who bring eggs and vegetables into the village for sale. They declared their intention of boycotting the town unless the governor should withdraw the decree.

MODERN ARMS IN THE SUDAN

Somebody Supplying Tribesmen With Upto-Date Weapons—Formerly Used Spears.

London.—News has been received from Abyssinia suggesting the presence in the Sudan of some adventurers who are arming and drilling tribes hitherto savage and unprovided with any weapons but the bow and spear.

Large quantities of rifles and ammunition have reached these tribes. The region chiefly affected is that between northern Uganda, the western border of Abyssinia and the southeastern corner of Anglo-Egyptian Sudan.

The rifles are of French manufacture and stamped with the date 1879, but it is declared that many of them are in reality quite new.

During the recent British operations under Major Leveson against the Anuaks in the Sudan, wild and practically naked tribes were all found to be armed with similar rifles, which had replaced their traditional spears and shields.

The savages had evidently been trained. They were clothed only in beads plus new bandoliers of cartridges, and it was remarkable that words of command were heard to be given by Gallas and Arabs to savages who had never before shown any signs of discipline or training.

WOULD LAND FISH ALIVE

Philadelphia Dealer Departs on 14,000-Mile Fishing Trip to Prove the Theory.

Philadelphia.—The experiment of transporting fish alive 14,000 miles is to be tested by Thomas Keeper, who left his home in this city on the Hamburg-American liner Kaiser Auguste Victoria for Siam via Hamburg. Mr. Keeper believes that the fish can be brought from Siam and landed in this country without difficulty in large fresh-water tanks, notwithstanding the long distance which they have to be carried.

Mr. Keeper believes that in a few years all edible fish will be sold alive, and that his experiment will bring about means by which scientists will enable dealers to sell fish alive at the door of every householder, and by this means eliminate a great deal of sickness from ptomaine poisoning.

Chinese fishing steamers, it is claimed, carry fish to their markets several hundred miles away with only a minimum loss.

NATURE RESCUES WOMAN

Fire Destroys a House That Was Moved by Flood Into Canal Path.

Louisville.—That English poet who wrote "Nature never did betray the heart that loved her"—and Mrs. Ellen Clark—were vindicated when fire of mysterious origin destroyed the woman's house here recently.

Several years ago Mrs. Clark's cottage was floated off its lot and deposited squarely on the route through which the government subsequently decided to construct a canal. Then it came time, a few weeks ago, to tell her that she must move the house out of Uncle Sam's way, she replied: "Nature put it there; nature can remove it," and that was all they were able to get out of her until they paid her a cash consideration of $150 to sign jump-claim papers.

And now Mrs. Clark is pointing to the ashes and taunting the federal agents with "I told you so."

MISSOURI HAS NEW DRINK

Every Silo Is a Distillery Producing Undistilled Corn Whisky by the Fermentation of Corn.

Columbia, Mo.—A new kind of intoxicating liquor has been discovered in Missouri.

Every silo is a drink factory in full operation, producing the primest sort of liquor and paying no tax or violating no law—even in dry counties. It is found at the bottom of the silo in sufficient quantities to make a whole neighborhood drunk.

The liquor is produced by the fermentation of the silage, which mixes with the water used to pack and cut-up corn as it is put in the silo. It is very much like the ordinary corn whisky before it is distilled.

While it is not expected to become fashionable at city bars, it is preferable to hair dye and Jamaica gin as a thirst quencher in rural communities.

PART OF PREHISTORIC MAN?

Human Teeth Found Eighty Feet Below Ground in California—Forty-Foot Lizard Also Seen.

Willows, Cal.—Human teeth found here in the borings from a well at a depth of 80 feet are believed to have belonged to a man who lived in a long past cycle.

Numerous bits of shellfish and a deposit of fine sea sands surrounded the teeth, which must have been deposited at a time when the Sacramento valley was 95 feet lower than at present.

T. L. Knock, manager of the ranch on which the teeth were found, has in his possession the skeleton of a 40-foot lizard, dug from a ledge of solid sandstone in the nearby Coast Range mountain.

Fined for Hugging Girl.

Paterson, N. J.—Because he hugged Freida Brickman against her wishes, Louis Bucceri was fined $50.

GUESSER IS OUSTED

Government Employed Man to Estimate Fish Weight.

Discharge Expert Who Had to Tell on Sight Number of Pounds in Each Salmon Bought for Breeding.

Bangor, Me.—The official guesser for the United States government has lost his job. For years the government has bought live salmon upon the good eye of a veteran fisherman, who took a squint at each fish and then put down in his book what he guessed to be the right weight. The bills were paid accordingly—thousands of dollars.

Every year the government buys from 600 to 1,000 live salmon for breeding from the weirs owners on the Bucksport, Verona, Orland and Penobscot shores.

The price paid is the market rate, from 20 to 30 cents a pound, with 60 cents bonus for each fish for the trouble of keeping them alive.

To get at the exact weight of a live salmon is practically impossible, for it is very delicate work at best in dipping them from the "pound" in the weirs to the "car," which is an old dory filled with water, carefully lined with cotton flannel and covered with a netting, which is covered outside with canvas. The utmost caution is necessary, for in the spring the salmon is strangely delicate. So it is that weighing them is entirely out of the question.

The government has for years hired a veteran fisherman to make the rounds of the weirs on the little power boat and keep account of the fish. All the man had to go by was his judgment, but he could tell by a glance at a fish, even in the semi-darkness of the car, about what it would weigh—ten, twelve, fourteen or perhaps sixteen or eighteen pounds.

It was guessing, but by years of experience in handling fish he could guess very near. At any rate, his guessing was accepted for years by the fishermen who sold the fish, as well as by the government.

Perhaps the government officials in Washington didn't approve of paying out money by guess. Whatever may have been the conclusion, the government guesser has lost his job. Hereafter twelve pounds will be the fixed weight of every salmon paid for. It may weigh eight pounds or it may weigh twenty pounds, but the fishermen are to be paid for a twelve-pound fish and no more nor less. This weight is below the average, as the fish run, but, of course, the fisherman is not obliged to sell an eighteen or twenty pounder at the twelve-pound basis to the government unless he chooses. He can send it to the markets.

The government is buying 1,000 fish this year, which, at the twelve-pound standard, will cost from $3 to $3.50 a fish.

BANDIT'S GOLD IS FOUND

Workmen Remodeling Old Plantation Manor House Discover Hoard of Notorious Bank Robber.

Liberty, Mo.—Ten thousand dollars in gold, believed to have been hidden by William Anderson, a bandit who terrorized central Missouri immediately after the Civil war, has been found in the old manor house on what was the plantation of William Burch, in Howard county, Missouri.

The property is owned by C. E. Yancey, of Liberty. Mr. Yancey was notified of the discovery by employees who are remodeling the old house.

According to those familiar with the story of the death of Anderson in 1868, he was wounded after robbing a central Missouri bank and stopped that night in the manor house of the Burch plantation, dying several days later. It was in the room in which the bandit slept that the money was found.

JUDGE LOSES HIS CLOTHES

Sil. Lawyers and Kansas Jurist Pretend to Be Boys by the River With Sad Results.

Kansas City, Mo.—Seven lawyers from this city went to a fishing resort near here and thought they would spend the week end in the old-fashioned way. Their boy nature got the best of them, and they all went swimming—bathing suits barred. When they were ready to return to camp a suit of clothes belonging to Judge John C. Pollock of the Kansas federal court was missing.

PLAN TO REFORM NEWPORT

Women of Resort Employ Detectives to Make "Survey" of Law Violations.

Newport, R. I.—Women identified with the millionaire's colony have had private detectives for several days making a "survey" of the city. It is said that the detectives will report on all varieties of violations of law here, including gambling, illegal liquor traffic and disorderly resorts. The report is to be sent to Governor Pothier.

Famous Hill to Be Leveled.

Greenwich, Conn.—Put's hill, made famous during the Revolutionary war by a daring ride by General Israel Putnam, is to be leveled because automobileists complain of its grades.

OLD FIRE DOG IS PENSIONED

Pet That Followed Engines on Every Call is Spending His Declining Years at Summer Resort.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Bearing the marks of many wounds received in honorable service, and having passed the age limit at which retirement is compulsory, Mack, the erstwhile mascot at Brooklyn fire headquarters, has been retired on a pension and is passing his declining years at a hotel on Shelter Island, L. I., where he is disproving the adage that an old dog cannot be taught new tricks.

Mack has become a "buff" of the Shelter Island Fire department, but cannot find enough exercise in the task to keep in physical condition. Instead of running to a fire a dozen times a day, as he did when at the Brooklyn fire headquarters, Mack now is lucky if he has a call to a fire once a month.

When the time hangs heavily he amuses visitors at the hotel by running up a ladder with the agility of a fireman. When Warren Schneider, the Brooklyn fireman who was counted as Mack's best friend, sent him to the hotel, Schneider said he did not believe Mack would live a month so far away from fire headquarters, but Michael Stacano made a bet with Schneider that not only the mascot would live but that he was not too old to learn a new trick.

Mack has fulfilled the prediction Henry Waither, proprietor of the hotel, writes to Schneider that Mack is big favorite with the visitors. He has taught the fire dog to extinguish lighted cigars and cigarettes thrown on the hotel veranda and to "play dead" and chase a ball with the children.

Mack had many escapes from death when he was running with the Brooklyn firemen. Once he was run over by the chief's wagon and a policeman was about to end his agony when firemen interfered and saved his life. Many times he has been kicked by the horses, but always recovered under prompt surgical treatment.

WOMAN FLIES IN PLANE

Philadelphia Resident of Reno Divorce Colony Makes First Ascent in Frisco.

San Francisco.—Mrs. Jane Wildman, bent on becoming a professional aviatrix, made her initial flight on the Alameda marshes across the bay from this city. She rose 3,000 feet and circled over the city of Oakland before descending. She was accompanied by Roy Francis, an aviator.

Mrs. Wildman appeared on the field in a rose-colored coat and a white corduroy skirt, and stood her first test remarkably well. She said she liked sensations and that her best substitute for the aeroplane heretofore had been 90 miles an hour on a motor-cycle.

The aviatrix is the wife of Frederick Colis Wildman of Philadelphia, who at present is in London. She is visiting San Francisco for a few days.

"I am from Reno," said Mrs. Wildman, "and that tells the story."

APACHE SLANG PARIS FAD

Exploits of French Motor Car Bandits Make Underworld Language Popular.

Paris.—The slang of the Paris Apaches is the latest fad taken up in society circles here. Not only French people, but also foreigners of the fashionable set here, are now vying with each other in picking up the largest stock of words and phrases of argot spoken on fortifications and in the outer slums.

Slang dictionaries are sold to tourists at the boulevard kiosks, and society women are taking lessons in argot, for which, of course, high fees are charged by the instructors.

Several American women are among those taking lessons, and it is believed to be one of them who originated the idea. The fad is thought to have arisen in consequence of the intense interest taken in the Paris underworld through the exploits of the motor bandits.

TURKEYS TO FIGHT WORMS

Only Way to Get Rid of the "Pests," Says a Georgia Farmer—Congress Gives $25,000 for Work.

Washington.—M. M. Kicklighter, a farmer at Groveland, Ga., has sent this tip to congress of a way to rid the south of the army worm:

"I saw your advertisement in the Atlanta paper for aid to check the army worm. I had ten acres of corn and the army worms had just started in. I drove my turkeys in my field and they ate the army worms up in two days, and if it had not been for my turkeys I would have lost 500 bushels of corn by those worms."

"So please send me a check for said amount, for that is the only way to destroy the army worms."

Congress recently appropriated $25,000 to eliminate the worm.

Fears Fish Had Hydrophobia.

New York.—Fearing that a pickerel that bit him on the toe had hydrophobia, Fred Henry of Brooklyn has sent the head of the fish to the Pasteur institute for examination.

Missed the Fly.

Chardon, O.—Norman Whiting was shaving himself when a fly settled on his face. Whiting made a quick movement for the fly and cut off the end of his nose.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE

THE TRESPASSER.

In a New York tenement where 25 cents for the gas meter is a problem and rent day is a tragedy a poor woman drew on her meager savings of dimes and pennies to summon a doctor for her baby, whose suffering was intense.

The doctor said the babe must have the fresh air of the parks.

Whereupon the mother took the child to Central park, which, valued by financiers as worth a billion dollars, belongs to the people of New York.

She saw an unoccupied lawn and took her baby there. Mother and child lay down upon the grass in the shade and soon were both asleep.

Scarcely were the slumbers begun than the majesty of the law appeared.

A park policeman awoke the tired mother, worn by the sleepless nights in the hot tenement, and demanded her name and address. He placed her under arrest and notified her to appear next morning in the court.

Terrified and weary, the poor mother went back to the stuffy, noiseome "home" to spend another sleepless night.

In the morning she left her baby with a neighbor and appeared before the magistrate, where she confessed to the heinous crime of trespassing on the people's premises.

The court fined her $1.

Weeping, the woman said the doctor's bill had taken all her savings, whereupon she was remanded to jail.

As she started to go with the policeman a probation officer who had witnessed the trial interfered and pleaded with the court to remit the fine, which the court did, but sternly remarked that the law must be enforced.

The probation officer afterward took the matter up with the park commissioner, who commanded the park policeman for the arrest.

Well—

Possibly the requirement to "keep off the grass" is proper and there must be a penalty.

But just the same—

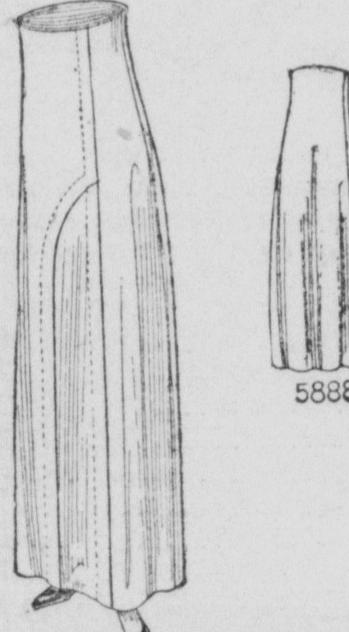

Mercy and discretion are never out of place. Surely should the future historian of the first quarter of the twentieth century come across this story of how a poor mother with a sick baby was arrested for trespassing in a park beloved by the people and remanded to jail he will pause and moralize on the cruelty of the age.

Almost Lost His Life

S. A. Stid, of Mason, Mich., will never forget his terrible exposure to a merciless storm. "It gave me a dreadful cold," he writes, "that caused severe pains in my chest, so it was hard for me to breathe. I did so and two bottles completely cured me." Use only this quick, safe, reliable medicine for coughs, colds or any throat or lung trouble. Price 50¢ and $1.00. Trial bottle free. BUILT TO ENDURE.

One reflection well worth our thought the pyramids suggest—the enduring character of the past beside the ephemeralness of our day. We build for the moment; they build monumenally. True we have printing, which they have not. But libraries are not lasting. Fire, accidental or purposive, has destroyed the greater part of the learning of the far past, and promises to do so with what we write now; and what escapes the fire mold may claim. Only that idea which is materially most effectively clothed can withstand for long the gnawing disintegration of time, says a writer in the Popular Science. The astronomic thought of the pyramid builders lives on today; where will record of ours be, I wonder, 5,000 years hence? We may be quoted, indeed, with ever increasing inaccuracy of transcription, but the star priests of a Draconic time speak in their own words still. To use Cheops is hardly more than a name; long since his ashes were scattered to the winds; but the buildings those old Chaldean soothsayers constructed for him remain, not only today the grandest monument of man, but the oldest and most significant astronomical observatory the world has ever had.

The improved farm land area of this country increased only 15 per cent. in the decade from 1900 to 1910. That is not enough to satisfy social and economic demands, or even to keep pace with our increase in population which was 21 per cent. To get the right perspective one must differentiate between farming land and improved farm land, says the Omaha Bee. Half of our territory is in farm land, but when it is stated that half of all our improved farm land lies within the states of Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and North and South Dakota, the need for a wider area of cultivated soil may be appreciated. Allowing land to yield less than it is capable of yielding is rank waste, and this waste is one of the vital elements in the advanced cost of living. It is not altogether a matter of getting people "back to the farm;" that is important, but getting those on the farm to adopt more effective methods of tilling the soil is quite as necessary, if not, indeed, more so.

Humor and pathos are often combined in incidents of settlement work. A Philadelphia worker tells of a family living in the slums whom she persuaded to use ice. They objected that they could not afford the expense, but she was insistent and they bought some. Then they realized that they had no ice chest to keep it in, and they rented one for a small fee. But this expense was so great a drain on the family's resources that ice could not be bought to fill it. The chest was proudly displayed on a table in the center of the living room, as a prized ornament. Eventually free ice was obtained for the happy household.

The shaving of pet dogs and cats in hot weather by solicitous owners, as reported to be a fact this summer, will doubtless bring the usual storm of sarcasm and protests from the critical contingency who think that consideration for animals is logically incompatible with sympathy for human suffering.

A woman in Paris got $1,600 damages for a broken tooth, caused by an automobile collision. It seems a large amount for one tooth, but it will serve the useful purpose of making automobile speeders more cautious about showing their teeth at the law.

"A widower of sixty-two with $8,000,000 seeks a bride of twenty, with blond hair, blue eyes and rosy cheeks." Being a widower and therefore wise, it will be useless for any of the chemical variety to apply.

The Russian Empire is the second in the world in area and the third in population, but only little Finland kept it out of the Paraguay class in the Olympic games.

The report comes from Washington that it is now possible to fry eggs by electricity sent wirelessly. Isn't this the solution of the cold storage problem so far as eggs are concerned?

"Mock Duck is in the Jug," says a headline in a New York paper. But if nothing more terrifying than mock duck comes out of the jug, it will be well.

He is a captious person who complains of the laundry bills that he has to pay the government for washing his money.

Some inventive genius should discover a way to prolong the green corn season.

New York is shooting its unmuzzled dogs, despite the sentimentalists.

If vacations were compulsory, how we should resent such tyranny!

GEORGE PETER,
County Chairman.

Oil the Coming Fuel.

So many advantages in economy and efficiency are offered by the use of oil fuel that its substitution for coal in ships of all classes, both in the merchant marine and in the navies of the world, is making extraordinary advances. This progress is notable in the Pacific trade. Seven new stations for oil supply are to be established on the west coast of South America as links in a chain that will ultimately extend from Tacoma, Wash., to Valparaiso, Chile. Within a few years the American continent from Alaska to Newfoundland will be girdled with such depots.—New York Herald.

Parliament En Auto.

The changing fashion in London locomotion was perhaps never better exemplified than on the occasion of the recent division on the home rule bill. At 11 o'clock, when members were trooping through the lobbies, there were probably not less than 50 or 60 motors—for the most part private carriages—in Palace Yard, and not a single hansom cab or four-wheeler. The last of the latter were in all probability those patronized by the late Viscount Wolverhampton and Sir Arthur Dignold. Now the horsed vehicle is practically extinct within the parliamentary precincts.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Cheap Cleaner.

A bicycle pump is a good substitute for a vacuum cleaner in getting dust from nooks and crannies in marble statuary, plaster casts, carved furniture or any crevices where it may lurk in spite of dust cloth and brush. Run the open end of the rubber tubing over the surface to be dusted, while working the pump vigorously with the foot. A soft dust cloth will do the rest.

Davis W. Mulvane, director of the Republican national headquarters, has issued a statement in which he welcomes the investigation of the senate regarding the campaign scandal funds. He says that he regrets that the committee has postponed further investigation until September and desires that it take up every phase of the contributions.

He says: "Let them turn on the searchlight. We welcome it. I had something to do with the pre-convention campaign, which resulted in the nomination of President Taft, and I know there is nothing we want to conceal."

"On the other hand, the source of the immense sums contributed to the Roosevelt campaign remains an unsolved mystery. Everybody knows that the amount expended was enormous and that the Perkins-Munsey-Hanna combination, representing the steel trust and the harvester trust, to say nothing of the friendly interest of railroads, which want an increase in passenger and freight rates, was back of Mr. Roosevelt.

"This combination," he asserted, "confess to have expended $300,000 in the vain effort to nominate Roosevelt, but everybody knows that this does not represent one-quarter of the vast sum which was distributed."

"The only thing for which I am sorry is that the inquiry has been postponed until the latter part of September. It is my regret they are not to turn on the searchlight right away. It would make interesting reading for the American public."

ROADS TO SEYMORE ARE POSTED BY LOUISVILLE CLUB

Signs Placed Along the Routes Through Scottsburg and Salem.

—H. L. Ramsey in Charge.

The roads from Louisville to Seymour by the way of Scottsburg and Salem were posted today under the direction of H. L. Ramsey, secretary of the Louisville Motor Club. The trip was made from Louisville to Seymour through Scottsburg and returning by the way of Brownstown, Vallonia and Salem in a motor truck furnished by one of the Louisville automobile firms. The boards are nailed to the telephone posts.

Mr. Ramsey covered the territory several weeks ago, and secured the information which appears upon the sign boards which were placed every few miles along the routes. The signs give the distance from Louisville, Seymour and Indianapolis, and also give the direction which a tourist should follow in making the trip. The signs are painted in silver with blue backgrounds and are very attractive. The Louisville Motor Club has posted many of the roads in Kentucky and this is one of the first routes to receive attention outside of that state. The Hoosier Motor Club has placed similar signs from Indianapolis to Columbus and the Seymour organization may finish posting the distance which is without signs.

PASSED MANY RAISED BILLS

Malatin Pasted an Extra Cipher On Tens.

DECEIVED EVEN THE BANKS

One of the Most Dangerous Counterfeeters in the Country Came to Grief at Hammond When a Raised Bill He Was Passing on a Saloon Keeper Exposed Its Weakness and He Now Is In Uncle Sam's Grasp.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 28.—The police have arrested Peter E. Malatin, a notorious counterfeiter, after a two years' chase had been made for him by federal officers. Malatin was turned over to Captain Porter of the secret service, at Chicago. Malatin raised $10 bills to $100 by clipping ciphers from $10 bills and pasting them on $10 bills. Malatin's work was so clever that Hegewich and Hammond banks were deceived. He gambled with two phoney $100 bills in West Hammond. He passed one bill on a Hammond saloon keeper, but as the latter rolled up the bill one of the pasted ciphers came loose and counterfeiting detection followed. In Detroit Malatin escaped a year ago by acting the idiot, and in Cleveland he broke away from the officer and escaped. He is regarded as the most dangerous counterfeiter at large. His "pal," Milos Manlich is doing time at Leavenworth. When arrested Malatin had a large roll of phoney bills on his person.

HEARD REVOLVER

Man Played Deaf and Dumb Until Police Frightened Him.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 28.—Upon arriving here to attend the American Bar association's thirty-fifth annual meeting, Attorney General George W. Wickersham announced that he denied the right of the association, after it has once seated a member, to oust him on the ground that it has been discovered that he is a negro.

Mr. Wickersham came to defend the title of William H. Lewis to a seat in the association. Lewis is an assistant to the attorney general. His membership was revoked by the executive committee on the charge that the committee elected him without knowing he was a negro. The executive committee, headed by S. S. Gregory, Chicago, president of the association, prepared a special report declaring it against the association's policy to admit negro members and saying Lewis and two others were seated on recommendations of local councils without the fact that they were negroes being made generally known.

The Bar association refused to draw a color line in its membership when the case of Lewis came before the convention. The two other negroes, Butler R. Wilson of Boston and William R. Morris of Minneapolis, also remained members of the association. The association dodged the color line question, in that it passed a compromise resolution requiring local organizations to state in the future whether or not a candidate for membership was a negro. This was freely admitted to be a compromise.

Girl's Clothing Caught Fire.

Gary, Ind., Aug. 28.—Wrapped in flames and screaming for help, Miss Esther Smith narrowly escaped death on a motorcycle, and is dying at her home. She was riding with Roy Roberts, and as the machine had no rear seat she sat on the gasoline tank. A spark from the motor ignited gasoline which had been dripping from the tank, and the girl's clothing caught fire. When Roberts tried to help her his clothing began to burn. Passengers on an interurban car helped extinguish the flames and the two were hurried to their homes.

Oil Field Doing Well.

Portland, Ind., Aug. 28.—Well No. 3 on the Losch farm in Pike township, recently completed, has started off on the first day's pumping with an initial production of forty barrels a day. Two other wells on the same lease are holding up well, and confidence is felt in the stability of the new field. Preparations are being made for the sinking of the fourth well.

Room For All on This Platform.

Indianapolis, Aug. 28.—President Taft, Theodore Roosevelt and Governor Woodrow Wilson will be among the headliners at the annual conservation congress in Indianapolis, Oct. 1 to 4, if they accept invitations extended to them. William J. Bryan and other national leaders of the political parties may also be among the notable speakers.

Hundreds Were Horrified.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 28.—Stepping off one streetcar into the path of another, Mrs. R. Lyle Kelley and two small children were dragged fifty feet and injured so badly that Mrs. Kelley and one of the children have little chance for recovery. The accident occurred in the downtown district and was witnessed by hundreds.

Record-Breaking Nut Crop.

Petersburg, Ind., Aug. 28.—Hickory trees in this vicinity are breaking down under the weight of the nuts. The crop will be the largest ever known here. There is also an abundance of walnuts and the pecan trees in the flats west of this city are well filled.

Victim of Snake Bite.

Brazil, Ind., Aug. 28.—Otto Steuerwald, a lumberman of Asherville, four miles south of Brazil, was bitten by a copperhead snake and is in a serious condition. Prompt treatment saved his life. The snake was killed.

DON'T NEGLECT CATARRH

Even in its early stages Catarrh is a most distressing complaint, known by its symptoms of stuffy feeling in the head and nose, roaring in the ears, mucus in the throat, difficult breathing, etc. When the blood becomes thoroughly polluted with catarrhal matter the inflammation extends to the bronchial tubes, causing hoarseness and often an aggravating cough, the stomach is affected, resulting in dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and gradually all the mucous membranes of the body become diseased. Catarrh is a deep-seated blood disease and must be treated constitutionally; it is beyond the reach of local treatment. Only temporary relief can ever be had from the use of sprays, washes, etc. S. S. S. cures Catarrh by cleansing the blood of all impure catarrhal matter and at the same time building up the entire system. It goes down into the circulation and removes all impurities. Then as pure, nourishing blood circulates through the body, the inflamed membranes heal, all discharges cease and every symptom of Catarrh passes away. Don't neglect Catarrh; cure it with S. S. S. as thousands have done. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free.

CHAPTER XXII.

The Storm Center Moves.

As soon as Berny had left his office Bill Cannon wrote a note to Mrs. Ryan, telling her of the interview he had just had with her daughter-in-law. He did not mention the check, simply stating Berny's decision to accept their proposal and leave her husband. The matter was of too intimate a nature to trust to the telephone and he sent the note by one of his own clerks, who had instructions to wait for an answer, as the old man did not know what Mrs. Ryan might already have heard from Dominick.

It threw its recipient into a state of agitated, quivering exultation. Mrs. Ryan had heard nothing from her son, and her hopes of the separation had sunk to the lowest ebb. Not so prudent as Cannon, she called up Dominick at the bank, asking him if it were true that his wife had left him, and beseeching him simply to tell her "yes" or "no." The young man, hampered by the publicity of his surroundings and his promise to Berny, answered her with the utmost brevity, telling her that there had been a change in his domestic life, but that he could not enter into details now. He begged her to ask him no further questions as he would be at home at three o'clock that afternoon, when he would explain the whole matter to her.

She wrote this to the Bonanza King and sent it by his waiting messenger. The old man felt relieved when he read the letter. He was confident now that Berny had not deceived him. She had told the truth, and was leaving the town and her husband, for what reason he could not yet be sure, but there seemed no doubt that she was going. They would ignore the subject before Rose, and, in the course of time, Dominick would break down the unflinching resistance she had threatened to make to his suit. The old man felt buoyant and exhilarated. It looked as if things were at last going their way.

He sent a message to Mrs. Ryan, asking her to let him know as soon as possible what Dominick said, and waited in his office in a state of tension very foreign to his usual iron stolidity. It was four o'clock before word came from her in the form of a telephone message, demanding his presence at her house at the earliest possible moment. He responded to it at once, and in the sitting-room of the Ryan mansion heard from Dominick's own lips the story of his false and tragic marriage.

The old man listened, unwinking, speechless, immovable. It was the one thing he had never thought of, a solution of the situation that was as completely unexpected to him as death would have been. He said nothing to Dominick about the money he had given Berny, did not mention having seen her. A sharp observer might have noticed that he looked a little blank, that, the first shock of surprise over, there was a slight expression of wandering attention in his eye, a suggestion of mental faculties inwardly focusing on an unseen point, about his manner.

He walked home, deeply thinking, abashed a little by the ease with which Fate unties the knots that man's clumsy fingers work over in vain. And it was untied. They were free—the boy and girl he loved—to realize his and their own dreams. It would need no years of wooing to melt Rose from stony resistance. Nobody had been sacrificed.

He felt a sense of gratitude toward Berny. Down in his heart he was conscious of a stirring of something that was kindly, almost affectionate, toward her. It did not require a great stretch of imagination to see himself and her as two knowing, world-battering rogues who had combined to let both and innocence have their happiness. He could almost feel the partnership with her she had spoken of, of bond of Masonic understanding, a kindred attitude in matters of ethics. They had a mutually low estimate of human nature, a bold, cool, unscrupulousness, a daring courage that never faltered. In fact, he was sorry he had not given Berny the whole fifty thousand dollars.

"She could have got it out of me," he said to himself, pondering pensively. "If she'd stuck out for it I'd have given it to her. And she might just as well have had it."

That evening for the first time in nearly three years Dominick Ryan dined with his mother in the great dining-room of the Ryan mansion. Cornelia was out with Jack Duffy, so Mrs. Ryan had her boy all to herself and she beamed and glowed and gloated on him as he sat opposite her, the reddened light of the candles falling on his beloved, familiar face.

After dinner they went into the sitting-room, the sanctum with the ebonized cherry furniture where the family always retired when important matters were afoot. Here, side by side, they sat before the fireplace with the portrait of the late Cornelia Ryan looking benignly down on them. They did not talk much. The subject of the young man's marriage had been thoroughly gone over in the afternoon. Later on, his mother would extract from him further particulars, till she would be as conversant with that miserable chapter of his life as if she had lived it herself.

To-night they were both in the quiescent state that follows tumult and strife. They sat close together, staring into space, now and then dropping one of the short disconnected sentences that indicate a fused, understanding intimacy. The young man's body was limp in his chair, his mind lulled in the restorative lethargy, the suspension of activities, that follows a struggle. His thoughts shrank shudderingly from the past, and did not seek to penetrate the future. He rested in a torpor of relief through which a dreamy sense of happiness came dimly, as in the faintest, most delicate whispers.

His mother's musings were definite and practical. She could now make that settlement, share and share alike, on both her children that she had long desired—Cornelia's would be a dowry on her wedding day and Dominick's—well, Dominick had had hard times enough. She would go down to-morrow morning and see her lawyer office:

Shocking Sounds

in the earth are sometimes heard before a terrible earthquake, that warn of the coming peril. Nature's warnings are kind. That dull pain or ache in the back warns you the Kidneys need attention if you would escape those dangerous maladies, Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see backache fly and all your best feelings return. in his head the various aspects of the curious story and its unexpected outcome. Once, as the memory of Berny weeping into his handkerchief recurred to him, he stirred uneasily and muttered to himself:

"Why didn't the damned fool stick out for the whole fifty thousand? I'd have given it to her as soon as not."

Meantime the storm center, the focus round which the hopes and angers and fears of this little group had circled, was speeding eastward in the darkness of the early night. Berny sat in the corner of her section with her luggage piled high on the seat before her, a pillow behind her head. In the brightly clear light, intensified by reflections from glazed woodwork and the surfaces of mirrors, she looked less haggard, calmer and steadier, than she had looked for many weeks. Relief was at her heart. Now that she had turned her back on it she realized how she had hated it all—the flat, the isolation, the unsuccessful struggle, Dominick and his superior ways.

The excitement of change, the desire for the new, the unfamiliar, the untried, which had taken her far afield once before, sang in her blood and whispered its siren song in her ear. She had missed a fortune, but still she had something. She was not plunging penniless into the great outside world, and she pressed her hand against her chest where the thirty-five thousand dollars was sewed into the lining of her bodice. Thirty-five thousand dollars! It was a good deal if it wasn't three hundred thousand.

As the train thundered on through the darkness she saw before her the lights of great cities, and heard the call of Liberty, the call of the nomad and the social vagabond, the call of the noisy thoroughfare, of the bright places, of the tumult and the crowd. The roving passion of the wanderer, to whom the spell of home is faint as a whisper in the night, passed into her veins like the invigorating heat of wine. She exulted in the sense of her freedom, in the magic of adventure, in the wild independence of the unknown.

THE END.

Remarkable Sworn Statement of a New Brunswick Druggist.

Have sold your Swamp-Root for twenty-eight years and have known its valuable curative properties for the past twenty years. For kidney, liver and bladder troubles, I have never known a single case where it has failed to relieve and cure. Right in my own household Swamp-Root cured my wife of catarrh of the bladder, while it cured me of liver and bladder troubles.

Numerous cases have come under my personal observation, which has made me very enthusiastic about recommending Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root to anyone suffering from kidney, liver and bladder troubles, and I have the greatest confidence in its merits. Have never heard any customers who have given Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root a trial speak of it in the highest terms. Yours respectfully, in the earth are sometimes heard before a terrible earthquake, that warn of the coming peril. Nature's warnings are kind. That dull pain or ache in the back warns you the Kidneys need attention if you would escape those dangerous maladies, Dropsy, Diabetes or Bright's Disease. Take Electric Bitters at once and see backache fly and all your best feelings return. "My son received great benefit from their use for kidney and bladder trouble," writes Peter Bondy, South Rockwood, Mich. "It certainly is a great kidney medicine." Try it. 50 cents at the Andrews Drug Co., Seymour, Ind.

Shocking Sounds

EARLY MOLTING OF CHICKENS

Western Poultryman Gives Excellent Method of Controlling Hens in Changing Feathers.

Most people believe that if they can force their hens to molt early they will lay more eggs during the season, but this is not true. Hens that have molted late will lay more eggs during the winter than the early molters.

This has been shown by the most careful experiments, but the facts are not generally known.

Molting hens require a large amount of feed containing nitrogen such as oil meal, meat and other feeds rich in protein. Molting can be forced by cutting down the feed of hens as it has been shown by experiments that scantily fed hens begin molting earlier than those on full feed, but the former do not finish molting much earlier.

Starved hens molt more uniformly than others and this is particularly noticeable in hens two or three years old.

In an experiment conducted by the Cornell experiment station it was found that on a basis of 100 hens the fed flock produced eggs to the value of $29.97 more than by the starved flock.

The total income from all the birds was $278 for the starved flock and $350 for the fed flock, a difference in favor of natural molting for the year of about $95.

A western poultryman of long experience gives his method of controlling molting as follows:

As soon as the hens are through laying he turns them out on alfalfa, feeding them dry bran only, in addition. Under this treatment they get thin. Then he feeds them a mixed ration of grains and meat, giving a light feed in the morning and all they will eat at noon and night. Under this treatment they finish molting quickly, get new feathers and begin laying in September. By October 1 they are all in good laying condition and make a profit through the fall and winter.

PLYMOUTH ROCK IS POPULAR

Blocky Shape Makes Them Excellent Breed for Broilers—Much Favored as Utility Fowl.

The Barred Plymouth Rock is without a doubt the most popular breed of chickens in this country—more of them are found on the farms than any other breed. On special poultry farms the Leghorn is a very popular breed, and in the poultry farming districts the Rhode Island Reds are almost exclusively used, says a writer in the Rural New Yorker. As a general utility fowl the Wyandottes

REAPING BENEFIT

From the Experience of Seymour People.

We are fortunate indeed to be able to profit by the experience of our neighbors. The public utterances of Seymour residents on the following subject will interest and benefit many of our readers. Read this statement. No better proof can be had.

Mrs. L. Sage, 319 W. Tipton St., Seymour, Ind., says: "I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are thoroughly reliable and can recommend them. I took this remedy a year ago when my back was so painful and lame that I could not stoop. My kidneys were weak and I was languid and nervous. My head often ached so badly that I thought it would split. Doan's Kidney Pills removed all the pains and aches and made my kidneys normal. I have told many other people about my experience and it gives me pleasure to do so. Other members of my family have taken Doan's Kidney Pills and in each case benefit has been received."

Effect of Electricity on Animals.

Scientists have for some years been experimenting on the effects of electricity on crops, but the latest development is the report of the experiments of Prof. Silas Wentworth on the effects of electricity on animals in California. A flock of 2,000 sheep was divided—one-half being placed under the power wires of an electric wire company and the remainder removed from the electrical area. The influence of the electricity is well shown in the fact that the sheep thus specially located produced an average of a fraction over two lambs each, while the ewes living in normal conditions yielded an average of less than one lamb each. The fleeces of the electricity treated sheep were also 20 per cent heavier than those of the others.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers acting directly on the mucous surfaces. Odd Cane Suspension Bridge

On the northeastern borders of India are to be found some most extraordinary examples of bridge building by primitive peoples. One of the most ingenious of these is the cane suspension bridge over the Siyom river, a picture of which is here presented.

ENT ENGLISH CUSTOM

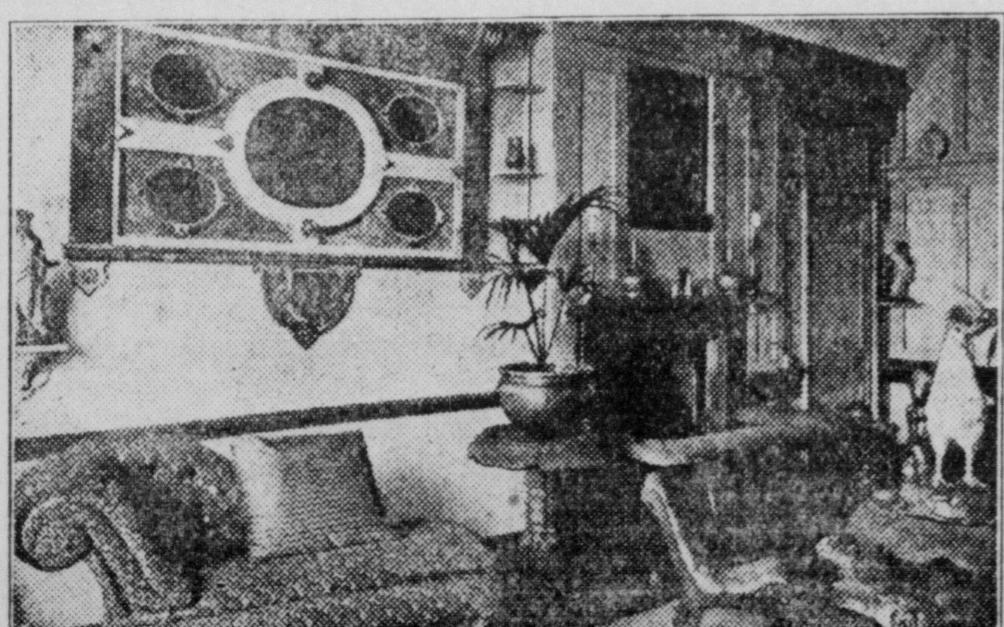

Early in July a custom older than Domesday is followed in the Oxfordshire village of Yarnton. On a given day the thirteen balls here illustrated—placed on a little flower support for the convenience of the photographer—are drawn one by one from the canvas bag in which they have rested for the last twelve months, each carrying with it the right to mow a definite portion of the common meadows. Three hundred and fifty acres of grass are thus apportioned by lot, a survival of the custom of open field cultivation when both arable and meadow land were apportioned in strips to the village householders. The meadow land being less in quantity and therefore more valuable was settled by an annual lot-drawing so that each man might have an equal chance of obtaining the better strips of grass. The arbitrary date for the lot-drawing, the first Monday after St. Peter's day, has been abandoned in favor of the

IS GRAY-HAIRED AT FIVE

Physicians are puzzled over the case of the five-year-old son of John De Frabis of West Berwick, Pa., whose hair is as gray as might be found in a person of fourscore years. The parents, who are normal, have four children, all mutts.

Where Fawkes Was Sentenced

"Please to remember the fifth of November," chant the English children on that date each year, in memory of the gunpowder plot of 1605 for the blowing up of King James I and parliament. Our illustration shows the council chamber in the tower in which Guy Fawkes, who was to have exploded the powder, was examined and sentenced to be drawn on a hurdle to the palace yard and there hanged and disemboweled.

MUSCLES TURNING TO BONE

Lying helpless in an armchair at the Homeopathic hospital in Great Ormond street, London, W. C., is a girl of fifteen named Edith Winter, who is suffering from a mysterious disease which is causing her muscles to turn into bone. It is the same disease that attacked Allan Rushbrook, known as the "brittle man," who left the same hospital partly cured some months ago. The disease began to develop soon after birth, and she was taken to the hospital a month or so ago. Since then a few signs of improvement have been observed in her condition. She cannot walk or even stand unsupported, and can hardly move her head at all, as the muscles of the neck on either side of the face have largely turned to bone. The muscles of the jaw have also hardened, and it is with some difficulty that she is able to eat.

Great care has to be exercised in moving her. "If she were to fall the hardened muscles might break," said a doctor recently. "When I lift her," said one of the hospital nurses, "I feel as though I am holding a bundle of sticks." It is four years since Edith took her last walk.

NOVELTY IN WALL PAPERING

A Bergenfield, N. J., man has just completed the decoration of a room in his home by covering the walls with a group of pictures taken from every newspaper in the east and representing an immense variety of scenes. He has been a newsdealer since 1899 and collected the pictures for many years. The pictures are carefully trimmed and arranged in four and in some cases five rows, each one exactly meeting the next pictures. Over the pictures the decorator applied two coats of varnish. The pictures are arranged with similar subjects in one row as nearly as possible. The second row below the ceiling is given over entirely to half-tone reproductions of well-known places in Europe. Below that comes a circuit of Gibson pictures. The fourth row is given over to pictures of the World's Fair at Chicago in 1893 from a newspaper. Civil war scenes run entirely around the room in the third row, and the top row is a sort of a frieze made up of colored supplements of amazing variety. There are nearly 500 pictures in all.

FECUNDITY OF HOUSE FLY

Dr. Howard of the bureau of entomology, Washington, calculates that a single house fly, starting about April 15 with an average brood of 120, would, if all her eggs were hatched and all in turn reproduced in like ratio, see by the end of the season her progeny to the number of 1,096,181,249,311,720,000,000,000. As each female usually lays four batches of eggs their unchecked development through twelve generations would make a mass of flies measuring 268,778,165,861 cubic miles, or considerably more than the size of the earth. "Fortunately," comments the Medical Record, "there are many things destructive to eggs, larvae and adult flies, so the number of the latter is kept down to a possible figure."

FINE SCULPTURE OF MAYAS

Archaeologists are continually digging up specimens of the sculpture of the Mayas in northern Yucatan. Our illustration shows one of the life-sized human figures found at Chichen Itza. It has the masked face and serpent designs that were a favorite form of decoration.

TRADED WIFE FOR TWO LOTS

On the ground that he had bartered her for two lots in Tacoma, Mrs. Ida M. Davis of Cleveland, Wash., was awarded a decree of divorce from James M. Davis. The complaint filed in the case recited allegations of cruel and inhuman treatment covering a period of several years, culminating in the sale by Davis of his spouse to one "Doc" Farrow for two lots in Tacoma and receiving a deed for the property.

WHEN THE MEN WORE MUFFS

Although the muff is now exclusively an article of feminine apparel, it was when first introduced in England, toward the close of the sixteenth century, used by both men and women. In fact, in the seventeenth century it was generally regarded as an essential part of the dress of a man of fashion. The muffs then used were somewhat similar to the present fashion—large and bulky.

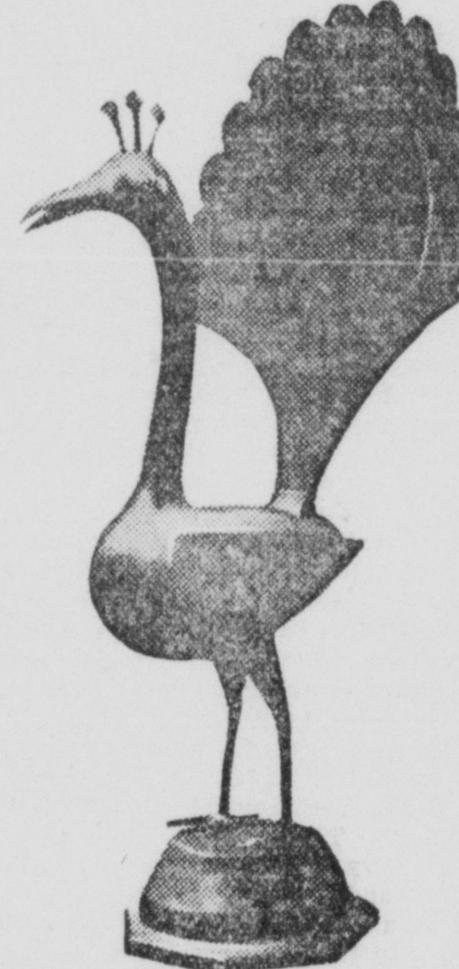

OLD MILL OF NEW LONDON

The old town mill at New London, Conn., was built by Gov. John Winthrop, the founder of New London, in 1651. The stream on which it was built was called Mill river, although scarcely deserving to be called a river. It is still, however, considerable of a stream and still turns the great overshot wheel that runs the mill to grind the town corn, for the mill is still in operation and grinds the corn in the same primitive fashion of two centuries ago. The shadowy, rocky glen in which it is situated has no appearance of ever having been disturbed since the founder's time, and one could scarcely imagine that the glen was more wild or primeval or its gloom more deep when the first few inhabitants of the town assembled in 1651 to build the dam than it is present.

That monopolies are not of the present day alone is told by the following, taken from the history of New London. When Gov. John Winthrop built his mill this clause was incorporated in the bargain: "Farther it is agreed that no person or persons shall set up any other milne to grind corn for the town of Pequett (now New London) within the limits of the town either for the present or the future so long as John Winthrop or his heirs do uphold a milne to grind the town corn."

The mill being a monopoly could not fail of becoming a grievance. It soon became insufficient for a growing community. It was leased to other parties and they failing to satisfy the townsmen, a complaint was made to the courts "that they were not duly served and were much damaged thereby," and in 1712 the monopoly was broken and other mills built.

PEACOCK-GOD OF YEZIDIS

When Queen Mary was in India last winter she admired a steel image of the sacred peacock of the Yezidis, in a curio established at Delhi. The proprietor now has given it to the British Museum. The Yezidis, a race scattered over Kurdistan, Armenia and the Caucasus, worship the redeemer devil in the semblance of a peacock under the name of Malik-i-Tawus. They believe he has regained his place in heaven as the highest of the archangels. This particular image is thought to have been made about 200 years ago. In the center of the tail is a veiled figure of a man, probably the Yezidi saint, Shaikh Adi.

ORGAN CACTUS OF MEXICO

The giant organ cactus gives a picturesque setting to the desert region of western Mexico. These thorny species of vegetation often tower to heights of 20 to 40 feet, their symmetrical columns rising upward in clusters, giving the tree a unique and attractive appearance. This particular cactus is of very slow growth, and some of the trees in the Pacific coast country of Mexico are said to be several hundred years old. The trunk is often three or four feet in diameter and the limbs to which the columns of thorny branches are attached extend outward in a regular and well formed fashion. To the native Mexicans this cactus is often food and drink as well as fuel. The more tender portions of the plant contain a bountiful supply of pure water which may be had by tapping or cutting them, and each season they bear large quantities of edible food. The trunk makes good fuel and is often used for that purpose.

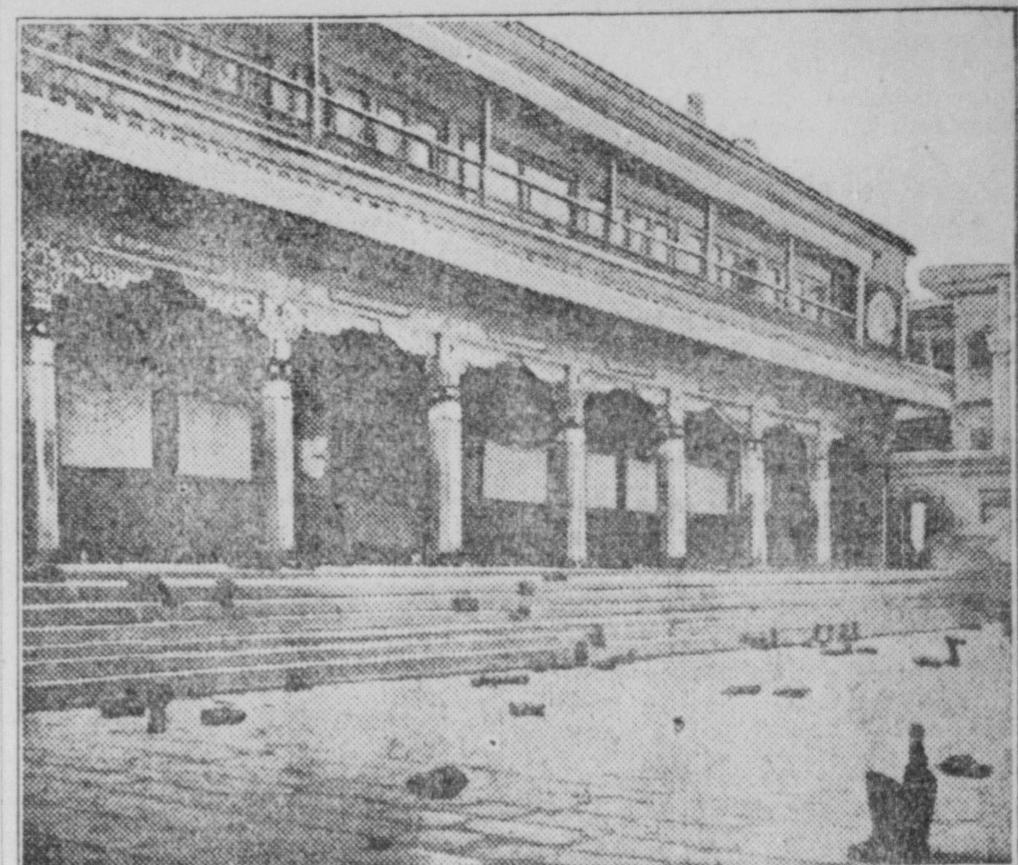

HE SURVIVED 25 SQUAWS

Patsy, who had the reputation of being the oldest Indian in the United States, is dead in his bark cabin near Hallock, Wash. It is believed Patsy was one hundred and twenty-eight years old. He once related his history to the mayor of Seabeck. He told of having had twenty-five squaws during the first eighty years of his life.

This is a view of the interior court of the great golden temple at Kumbum, northwest China. The scattered boats seen are cast off by the lamas when they enter the building for service. This famous monastery is situated on the borders of Tibet and Mongolia and as a center of Tibetan Buddhism it ranks little below the great monasteries at Lhasa and Shigatse. It is inhabited by some 4,000 lamas and its abbot is considered to be the reincarnation of Tsongkaba, the saintly reformer of Tibetan Buddhism.

SAVED BY CARRIER PIGEON

WAGNER'S CAP IN BAD LANDS

The "Bad Lands" of South Dakota contain many strange rock freaks. Large rocks are balanced on little ones; pillars with singular looking caps are seen; other rocks are eaten away until they resemble honeycombs; mushroom forms are common, and great many rocks have distinct facial expressions. Such peculiar forms, when presented in the many colors, which distinguish the "Bad Lands," and accompanied by the almost universal silence which pervades the region, are impressive to a degree. The rock shown in the photograph has been called Wagner's Cap, as having a resemblance, from some viewpoints, to the cap with which the famous composer, in portraits or marble busts, is usually crowned. Wagner's Cap is said to show, from various angles, seven different distinct outlines of human or animal faces, in the strange and curious shapes assumed by the rocks in this district. The Indians found a supernatural influence and many are the explanatory myths.

HOLLOW LOG TRAPS FISH

A hollow log sunk in the Forked Deer river, near Humboldt, Tenn., forms one of the most efficient fish traps imaginable, and for many years it has yielded P. L. Draper and J. L. Henderson, near whose farms it is located, all the fish they cared to use and left some over for their neighbors.

Recently they took fifty-four pounds of catfish from the log at one haul, one weighing thirty-six pounds and another eighteen pounds.

Messrs. Draper and Henderson claim that they are violating no anti-trapping game law in taking fish from the hollow log, as they did not put it in the river and are not to blame for the fish getting into the log.

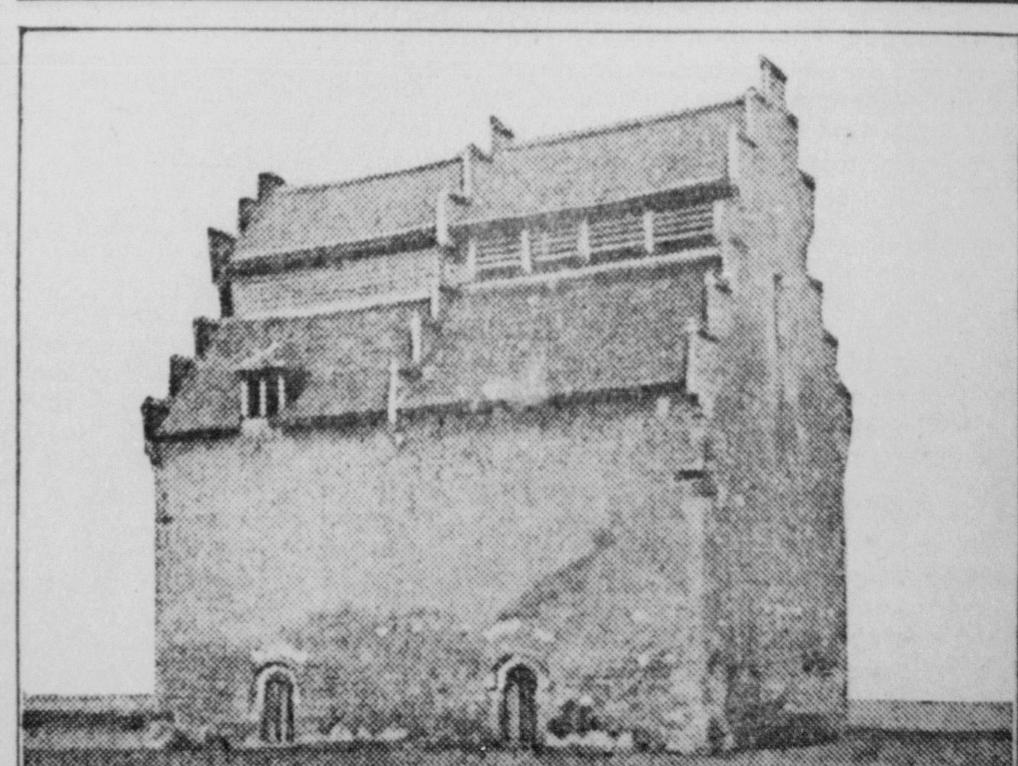

BRAYS AT RAILWAY CROSSING

"As little sense as a donkey," is a favorite expression of contempt, but sometimes the four-footed creature shows intelligence far greater than the two-footed species. There is a donkey at Laredo, Tex., whose daily performance is entitled to special mention. The donkey is attached to a water cart, a two-wheeled vehicle used by Mexicans to peddle water among the homes of some of their countrymen. It is driven across a railroad track about ten times each day and each time as it nears the track the donkey stops and brays vociferously. No amount of persuasion can get the animal across the track until it has stopped and given notice to trains on the right of way that it is coming.

SAVES LIFE BY RIDING BULL

A Cheyenne (Wyo.) man, while attempting to drive a bull to pasture the other day, in some way angered the animal and was cornered in a corral. He was astride a horse, but was unable to escape. The bull pressed him hard, and to save himself he leaped from his saddle to the animal's back. Then began a series of plunges, but the rider's cow punching days stood him in good stead, as he clung to the animal's shaggy mane. One of the rushes brought him close to the fence, and the man leaped from the animal's back, going over the top rail as the animal started to gore him.

Queer Ancient Dovecote

Of unusual form and great interest to students of architecture is the dovecote here pictured. It stands in the village of Willington, England, four miles from Bedford, and dates from the reign of Henry VII. The Bedford Art club is taking steps to preserve the ancient building from destruction.

BALTIMORE & OHIO COMPANY IS READY FOR BIG BUSINESS

President Willard Says That the Road Will Be Able To Take Care Of Rush Expected.

Daniel Willard, president of the B. & O., who, a year ago, predicted that, with big crops and a return to anything like normal prosperity, a greater car shortage than that of 1907 would prevail this year, says at this time he sees no occasion to change his views.

Car builders, he says have been doing little business for the last two years, which means that the railroads have not been buying new equipment. It is a question whether the railroads have prepared themselves during the period of dullness for conditions when the crop-moving season is in full swing. As to the situation on his own road, Mr. Willard says: "We have endeavored to place the company in as strong a position as possible to take care of the large business that is promised this year. During the last three years the B. & O. has expended $60,000,000 on the property for improvements, additions, betterments and new rolling stock. During this year the company has added to its compliment of equipment more than 400 engines and 25,000 freight cars."

Although the thermometer has hovered about the ninety mark for several days local people may be required to get out their cloaks and overcoats before the latter part of the month. Parson Hicks, the St. Louis weather prophet, predicts that there will be several storms followed by a cold wave during the closing days of the month. He states that there may be frost in the northern part of the state and that the temperature on the southern portion will be low enough for shivers.

DEATH OF WILLIAM WALLACE AT PERU STILL A MYSTERY

Police Continuing Investigation Upon The Theory That Man Was Murdered.

Charles Wallace returned this morning from Peru where he has been making an investigation of the death of his brother, the late William Wallace, whose body was found along the C. & I. tracks several weeks ago. The police are still investigating the death and are of the opinion that Wallace was murdered and his body was placed along the right of way.

When Wallace left Indianapolis the day before the murder, he had a large sum of money with him, however when his body was found the money, a gold watch and some other valuables were missing. He was also without hat and shoes when found, and it is supposed that the murderers stole these. The police hope to have the investigation completed in a short time, although there are several facts which they will ascertain before the guilty parties can be arrested.

THE SITUATION GROWS WORSE

Mexican Conditions Well Nigh Unendurable.

INTERVENTION IS PROBABLE

United States Government Is Viewing With No Small Degree of Concern the Situation as It Has Developed in the South of Mexico, Where the Madero Government Practically Has Relinquished the Reins to Anarchy.

Washington, Aug. 28.—There have been received here reports from south Mexico so alarming as to make the danger of American intervention in that country greater than ever before. So serious has the situation appeared to President Taft that in discussions with members of the cabinet and others recently he has expressed the gravest fears of necessity for far more drastic action on the part of the United States than has yet been taken in Mexico.

It is stated that while the operations of General Orozco and his men in northern Mexico, near the United States border, are exasperating to a degree and injurious to American interests, the most serious phase of the situation lies in the conditions existing in southern Mexico. In the southern states Zapata is the recognized rebel leader. His bands have been operating continually for many months and have got the upper hand in the southern states that authority of the federal government is exercised but fitfully and has almost disappeared.

Little that has been going on in these states has reached the outside world. Consequently it has been generally believed that conditions in the south of Mexico were greatly improved and that the situation was again approaching the normal. The greater publicity given the movements of General Orozco and his chieftains has concentrated attention upon his forces as the principal disturbing element in Mexico.

The contrary, however, is true. Robbery and pillaging are going on constantly in the southern states, with practically nothing done to put a stop to it. Cruelties of the most fiendish nature are being practiced by the outlaws and the government forces alike.

This is the second cowardly attack on an American charge d'affaires, the other case being that of Mr. Tarler, in August, 1908.

Mr. Gibson has been obliged to sternly call down the Cuban government for not making payments of long overdue debts to American contractors, and only yesterday he secured the payment of over half a million to Hugh Reilly, the contractor who sewered Cienfuegos. The members of the cabinet are very angry at Gibson on this account, and the Cuban newspapers have been abusing him and Minister Beaupre in the most scandalous fashion for the frequent admonitions President Gomez has received from Washington in regard to paying these claims.

Failed to Give Bond.

Shelbyville, Ind., Aug. 28.—Failing to give bond of $1,000 each, Frank Anderson and John Copple are in jail awaiting a preliminary hearing on the charge of assault and battery with intent to murder and rob Earl House of this city. The two men met House near the fair ground and beat him into insensibility. His cries for help aroused the people of the neighborhood, and they recognized Anderson and Copple, who were making a hasty retreat.

Outcome of Drunken Fight.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., Aug. 28.—In a drunken fight Charles J. Grassity, an ex-convict, cut Joseph E. Cross seven times with a razor. Physicians took fifty-six stitches to close the wounds. Cross is in a serious condition. Grassity, who has spent twenty-two years of his life in prison, escaped over the river into Kentucky.

B. R. Tillman, United States senator from South Carolina, has won out over both his opponents, having polled a majority of all votes cast in the state-wide primary.

The Progressives of the Eighth (Ind.) congressional district have nominated Edward C. Toner of the Anderson Herald as the new party's candidate for congress.

The republican mayor of Guarda, Portugal, arrested a monarchist priest, who drew a revolver and shot and fatally wounded the mayor. He fled, but was captured by a mob and lynched.

The British war office has refused an application for disused rifles for the new organization known as the "Citizen Volunteers of Ireland," which is now being formed in Ireland professedly along non-political lines.

The Roosevelt leaders in Pennsylvania will withdraw the Roosevelt electors off the ticket if the Taft managers will agree that the plan to nominate a Prosser state ticket in opposition to the Republican ticket be abandoned.
